Cancer in Europe

20% - This is the percentage of deaths caused by cancer in the European Region (WHO)

Europe is characterized by striking geographical differences in cancer occurrence. There were an estimated 3.5 million new cancer cases and 1.9 million cancer deaths in Europe in 2012. Cancers of the female breast, colorectal, prostate and lung constitute over half of the overall incidence, while lung and colorectal cancer rank as the most common causes of cancer death.

Cancer continues to present a huge challenge for patients, and their families, and society as such.

Since the mid-1990s the legalization of cannabis has grown to be approved in many USA states and EU countries for medicinal use. This Industry is poised to launch nationally, likely achieving the same status as alcohol did at the end of prohibition. Medical advances, new significant contribution to the tax revenues and health system, the rise in economic growth and new jobs, are just a few persuasive reasons countries are passing new legislative initiatives. By bringing cannabis out from the euro 100 billion underground economy to be controlled with compliance for quality, consistency, labeling, etc. countries reverse the trends of millions of dollars flowing out of their control.

The European Union's population of 510 million is base for Cannabis Market. Germany, with more than 80 million people alone, legalized medicinal cannabis in January of this year (2017). In addition to Italy's nascent existing medicinal cannabis program. European markets are increasingly important to the cannabis sector. Each has a well-funded medical system, residents who seek natural and complementary therapies, and a government-supported mandate to stop the rising tide of opiate addiction related to chronic pain treatment.
Cannabis for medicinal use represents on growing potential in terms of investments as well as noninvasive health medicine. European market is estimated to a fantastic size of 18 billion EUR.

According to the Canna Tech, between 2013-2016 some 79,500 tons of hemp were produced across Europe. In 2016, 25,000 hectares of European land was used for the cultivation of hemp, equating to an estimated value of €40 million. However, the European Industrial Hemp Association (EIHA) estimate that number to be much higher in the nearest future having been on steady incline since 2012.

It is conservatively estimated that the European cannabis market is worth €18 billion. This hefty figure only accounts for Europe’s eight largest markets.

Due to the fragmented nature of the current cannabis climate, Europe is currently in the development stage. Though it is predicted that once regulatory and legal frameworks are clarified, the industry will quickly progress through the ‘growth’ and ‘shake out’ phases.

Due to constantly high inclining global demand for medicinal cannabis and the fact that Europe is expecting to be in the next 10 years in the fast development stage we expect that prices for the products and medical services using medicinal cannabis will be determined with the level which ensure adequate incentive for substantial level of new investments in Cannabis Health Investment projects in Europe and globally. In the table below the real potential of medicinal cannabis can be revealed.
